Electric Load Growth Regionally

- Western Electric Coordinating Council released a report in November 2023, that predicts the potential for capacity shortfalls across the West after 2025. That's due to a perfect storm of factors: Electrification of the transportation system, the retirement of fossil fuel resources, rapidly increasing demand, and delays getting new sources of carbon-free energy onto the grid.

Electric Load Growth Locally

- The District's recently completed its 2023 to 2032 Integrated Resource Plan. It identifies the potential for our load to double in the next five years.
